A "how to" guide for companies working in developing countries, addressing the twin problems of firstly maintaining political legitimacy, and, secondly, promoting sustainable development. It helps readers learn how to both play stakeholder politics and collaborate with stakeholders towards sustainability goals.

Laying out an easy-to-follow guide on how to achieve and maintain political legitimacy on environmental matters, this title champions sustainable development and attaining good relationships in the process. Devised and written by a highly experienced researcher and environmental consultant, readers are presented with Robert Boutilier's approach as he outlines ways in which to benefit from stakeholder networking and targeting sustainability. Case studies of companies that have followed the approach highlight the successes to be gained. This title is useful for environmental academics and managers alike. - The Environmentalist 77 (5 May 2009) About the Author Robert Boutilier is President of Robert Boutilier Associates, a Vancouver-based consulting firm specializing in stakeholder relations.
