SochaI do a weekly radio show and these stats are useful before the show to loosen up the guest, etc.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Three StarsBy DerekEntertaining in short bursts, but no linking story line1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Short StuffBy Ex-FBI GeezerGreat bathroom reading; seldom over one page on a Kindle. I bought it when I was about to have surgery, and it served me well. Don't expect to be much smarter when you have finished it.

Harvard Business Review is the leading destination for smart management thinking. Through its flagship magazine, 13 international licensed editions, books from Harvard Business Review Press, and digital content and tools published on HBR.org, Harvard Business Review provides professionals around the world with rigorous insights and best practices to lead themselves and their organizations more effectively and to make a positive impact.

Included in Publishers Weekly's Fall 2013 Announcements: "Fascinating stats, useful tips, and entertaining topics culled from the Harvard Business Review's popular newsletter, The Daily Stat, offer compelling insights that amuse and inform." "Who knows what the value of these studies is, but they make for fun reading." ? Boston Globe About the Author For over 30 years, Bob has worked with Senior Executive Teams and Boards on their most vital strategic and organizational challenges, both as a consultant and a corporate executive. He is considered one of the world's leading strategic facilitators, having designed and conducted offsites in sixteen countries with companies ranging from Fortune 10 multinationals to German mittelstand family businesses. Bob is the author of four Harvard Business articles: Off-Sites That Work (June 2006, co-authored with Logan Chandler), When Teams Can't Decide (November 2008), Who Really Makes The Big Decisions in Your Company? (December 2011), and Leadership Summits That Work (March 2015, co-authored with Cary Greene). HBR named When Teams Can't Decide one of ten 'must read' articles on teams
